We are proud to announce that Jean Zachariasiewicz was selected by The Daily Record to receive one of the 2018 Leading Women awards.

The Daily Record's Leading Women awards recognize women who are 40 years of age or younger for the tremendous accomplishments they have made so far in their careers. They were selected based on professional experience, community involvement and a commitment to inspiring change.

"Leading Women are making an incredible impact on their professions. In addition, they share a relentless commitment to inspiring change and are active volunteers and leaders in their communities," said Suzanne Fischer-Huettner, publisher of The Daily Record. "They are extremely accomplished, and their early success is just a prelude to the future."

Jean's practice focuses on civil rights law, including fair housing, disability rights, police misconduct, and prisoner rights. She also has experience in constitutional litigation, class actions, and contract negotiations. Jean represents clients in state and federal court, as well as state administrative bodies and has appellate experience, having argued in the Fourth Circuit and the Maryland Court of Special Appeals. Jean works to ensure that her clients' stories, experiences, and concerns are heard and respected, whether her client is a powerful corporation or a prisoner.
